General communication	Relevance rating: 0 - 5	Comments:
Cultural and Languages	5	It's very important to have an understanding of the language spoken during the discussion.
Tone of voice	1	Tone of voice cannot be expressed through email but you can use capitals or exclamation marks to show you are expressing it.
Terminology	3	Using the correct words for email is important because emails have a more formal use, therefore having formal language would be better.
Specific Format	3	This type of format is a webmail.
Importance of accuracy	4	Having accurate info is very important because a discussion needs to contain accurate info so the discussion is truthful.
Keeping audience engaged	5	Keeping the audience engaged is important because you need to have people listen to your decisions in order to be part of a discussion.
Requires Technology	5	Technology is needed to talk in webmail because it uses a computer and the internet for it to function.

Questions and Answers	4	Questions and answers are important in a discussion because it's what builds one.

Interpersonal skills	Relevance rating: 0 - 5	Comments:
Verbal	0	Verbal skills cannot be used on email because voice cannot be sent over an email.
Visual or hearing impaired	3	Being visually impaired means you cannot see the screen, but that depends on the level the visual impairment is. If its minor it can be helped with glasses, if its major you won't be able to use the computer. Being hearing impaired wont affect how you use email.
Body Language	0	Body language cannot be expressed through email.
Positivity or negativity	4	Having positive and negative views in a discussion is important because it can have a contrast in the discussion, there is a more reinforced final conclusion.

Summarising and repeating	2	Repeating isn't important because once an email is made it can be read at any time. Summarising a point is important so you point a clear view on the subject the discussion is about.
Environmental barriers	2	The environment can be a barrier, these barriers consist of: a fire, internet outage, power outage, etc. This would cause the webmail to be unavailable to use.
Social barriers	3	Being introvert or something similar may affect how confident you are to communicate to people, if you don't communicate you can be part of the discussion.
Questioning; Open, Closed etc.	3	Having open questions in a discussion is very important because you need detailed feedback from the group. Closed questions can help put a final verdict on the subject.
Responding; Speed, tone etc.	3	Responding is very important in a discussion. The speed of response can be fast but not too fast, being to slow isn't much of a problem but it is time wasting. The tone has to be loud enough for everyone in the room to hear, if you are too quiet people or the minute taker may not hear you. Too loud you may be seen as obnoxious and people can ignore you.

Written communication	Relevance rating: 0 - 5	Comments:
Emoticons	1	Emoticons aren't very important because you don't need them in a discussion but they can be used to display emotions.
Accurate information	5	Having accurate information is important in a discussion because you need to make a point in which you understand fully so no mistakes can be done or just the embarrassment of correction from others.

Spelling and Grammar	5	Having understandable spelling or grammar is important in a discussion because you need to be understood.
Specific Structure; i.e. Look	5	The structure is relatively important because it makes it easier and faster for others to read your email, and since it's an email is must be formal.
Relevance of contributions	5	Taking part in the discussion is very important because a discussion require you to communicate with others, if you do not communicate you are technically not part of the discussion.
Need to proof-read	4	Proof reading can be important because mistakes can be made but even if you do make a mistake your post can be edited at any time.
Balanced views shared	4	Balanced views are important because you can see both sides of the spectrum on the discussion.
Note taking	2	Note taking is not a really important in an email because emails are permanent unless you delete them, but you can use notes to simplify an email.

Dear Class

Video games can make young people desensitized, but it depends on their mental fitness. Most children can see that there is no link between violence video games and the violence in the real world, but some children have different mental states and they will not be able to distinguish the differences.

A study in the publication Social Psychological and Personality Science, found that aggression triggered by video games can last for up to 24 hours after the game is played if the player continues to think about the game.

I believe the common view of violence in video games can affect some people, and some it doesn't have an affect.

Regards

Dear Class

As I mentioned before, mental state can impact desensitization on video games, but why does video games get the blame for desensitisation. Humans were always sadistic towards others, hence the definition of the word: Schadenfreude. Ever since the dawn of time there were people desensitized towards violence. Public executions were often seen by the public during the middle ages. War has also existed since the existence of human beings.

When I do believe video games can desensitize young people, I think that video games should not get the blame.

Regards.

Dear Dylan

Our sadistic nature is to blame, we always have that feeling on other people we simply hate when they get humiliated or that feeling over superiority. Take a look at our dark history: Socialism / Communism, public executions, war. People have always hated others, and had that feeling of satisfaction when they are defeated.

Regards

Dear Dylan

Depends what type of video game you are speaking of, if its an online game then yes because there are other people playing for your team and the opposing team, giving the sense of competitiveness, which can bring sadistic behaviour towards each other. Single player games have AI controlled players so it wouldn't impact as much.

Overall, multiplayer games can have an affect with our "sadistic minds" because of its violence, which can desensitize us. It desensitizes some people because they spend too much time in violence, making violence a common sight for the player.

Dear Class

Overall, from the discussion, I believe that people are desensitized from violence, but video games are not the main cause. I believe that our sadistic nature or "schadenfreude" is the main cause of desensitization towards violence. Yes games can lead young people to lead to desensitization, but it does not affect everyone.

Kids may be developing and may have much stronger feelings than most adults and those feelings may be heavily impacted but games do have age restrictions, so the parents are partially to blame for buying the violent video games for their small children.

The reason I disagreed from the fact that video games desensitized people is from personal experience, I have seen and played violent video games from a young age, yet when I see war or anything violent on the news I genuinely feel awful for those people affected.

Regards.
